It is an advertisement which says "It is in your interest as an employer to interview me because of what I can do for your company." A good resume will increase the probability of your being interviewed, which is often the hardest part of the job search process. However, even the best written resume provides no guarantee that you will be invited to an interview. When possible, your resume should be focused on the specific job opportunity you are seeking. Therefore you may develop different resumes for different situations.
